THE SPREAD OF CHRISTIANITY IN THE MODERN WORLD

By EDWARD CALDWELL MOORE

Plummer Professor of Christian Morals
Harvard University

AN authoritative book on this subject has long been needed. The writer, who has for many years been identified with the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, has provided a work which will be welcomed by every student of the history of Christianity. The book gives a survey of the history of missions since the beginning of the modern era, about 1757, and depicts the missionary movement against the background of general history. It sets forth the relation of missionary endeavor to contemporary conditions, political and commercial, social and intellectual. The author shows the part which missions have played in making the modern world what it is, and the part which the modern world with all its manifold elements and complex tendencies has had in making modern missions what they are. The book may be used as a text in the senior college, the seminary, or the adult department of the Sunday school.

The new interpretation of the Hebrew religion regards it as a progressive development closely related to the history, environment, and social and religious affiliation of the people of Israel

The Origin and Growth of the Hebrew Religion

By HENRY THATCHER FOWLER

Brown University

This textbook presents the fascinating story of the genesis of Israel's religion and its long, steady development to the religious idealism of Isaiah, Ezekiel, and Jeremiah. It is so interesting that college students, church classes of adults and young people, and Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. groups alike will be inspired by it and will delight in studying it.

THE LIFE OF PAUL

By BENJAMIN W. ROBINSON

Professor of New Testament Literature and Interpretation, Chicago Theological Seminary

(In the series Handbooks of Ethics and Religion)

THIS book aims to embody the most important results of recent discovery and research in a compact, lucid biography which will furnish every help needed by the student in finding his way to a full appreciation of the achievement of the apostle. The career of Paul is sketched in close relation with the life of his time. The opening chapter is devoted to the social and religious situation of the Roman world in the first century. The New Testament passages fully listed at the head of each chapter encourage thorough study of the sources, and references to the best modern literature lead the way to more complete command of available information on all related subjects. In Paul is seen the same spirit which in the present age has impelled men to start out for otherlands to give their all that the nations may have liberty and light.
